BIOGRAPHY

Increasingly active in the Seattle music scene after many years on stage in New York City and Toronto, Deb Montgomery finds herself performing regularly and on the brink of two album releases. In the early summer of 2018, she worked with producer Mikel Perkins at Soundhouse (Seattle) to record All the Water. With primal sounds of heavy drums and fattened bass, this edgy and energized EP brings her rock roots to the forefront and continues to explore the depths of grace needed to move through life's vulnerabilities and losses. The beauty of arranged strings sprinkled throughout the album suggests the paradoxical lightness that can sound like grace in the midst of all else. All the Water attempts to invite the listener to Hold On while feeling the paradox that is both faith and falling, vulnerability and grit.

QUOTES

“Montgomery’s rock roots bring together this edgy energized collection with a raw passion. It works and it’s superb. The more than twenty years and four studio albums, film credits, and stage appearances with superbly talented musicians, grounds and solidifies Deb Montgomery in the rock industry

— Sherryl Craig, Nashville Music Guide

“As a musician, singer, songwriter, and band leader, Montgomery has never been on more confident footing, and with good reason. This EP is a career achievement and an advancement on an already impressive catalogue of songs.

— Elijah Dhaaven, Rain City Collective

“Montgomery showcases an electric evolution on her new EP titled All the Water. The Seattle folk-rocker channels the virtue of Neil Young, the bravado of Patti Smith and the vulnerability of Conor Oberst on this tender yet triumphant five song EP.

— Know More Music Blog

“Wonderfully shaped with both delicacy and muscularity, All the Water is one of this year’s must-listen-to gifts from a brilliant artist—Deb Montgomery.”

— Randall Radic, Tattoo.com

“I wouldn’t call these songs catchy as much as they are infectious. If you’re not sure of the difference then just listen to these with an open mind and you’ll find yourself singing along with them whether or not you want to. I know I can’t seem to stop listening to it...”

— Joshua Macala, Raised by Gypsies ::

“With her latest EP, Montgomery uses tactile imagery to personify various trials, tribulations, and triumphs in a way that we can all relate, through connection to the inevitable processes of the natural world. Well crafted and heartfelt.”
